FOREWORD

In the opening paragraph of its report the Butler Committee observed "Politically there are . . . two Indias, British India, governed by the Crown according to the statutes of Parliament and enactments of the Indian Legislature, and the Indian States under the suzerainty of the Crown and still for the most part under the personal rule of the Princes. Geographically India is one and indivisible, made up of pink and yellow. The problem of statesmanship is to hold the two together."

2 That is how 19 years ago the problem of the Indian States presented itself to the authors of this important report on the Indian States. But were there really two Indias? And was the problem merely to hold them together?

3 A glance at the map (Appendix I) showed that geographically India was one and indivisible. The territories of the Indian States were dovetailed into, and closely interwoven with, those of what was then British India. Even where the map showed solid blocks of the Indian States the territories were so irregular that the States had enclaves in the Provinces and vice versa.

4 The main part of the communications essential to the welfare of the whole of the country passed in and out of the territories of the Indian States. A community of interests in the wider economic field linked the States with the Provinces. If the States and the Provinces failed to co-operate in implementing policies on matters of common concern, there was a vacuum which rendered it impossible to enforce effective measures in respect of such matters in any part of the country.

5 The geographical set up of the Indian States did not coincide with any ethnic, racial or linguistic divisions. The peoples of the Provinces and the States had suffered alike from the waves of foreign invasions and foreign domination. Close ties of cultural affinity, no less than those of blood and sentiment, bound the people of the States and the Provinces together.

6 What was it then that separated the Indian States from the rest of India? Firstly, the historical factor that unlike the Provinces the States had not been annexed by the British Government. Secondly, the political factor that the States maintained the traditional monarchical form of Government.

7 Did these factors, however, really segregate the States from the Provinces and create an impassable political barrier between them? The freedom of the Indian States from foreign subjugation was only relative; the paramount power controlled the external affairs of the States and exercised wide powers in relation to their internal matters. The whole of the country was, therefore, in varying degrees under the sway of the British Government. Besides in the context of the demand for India's freedom the degree of control exercised by the British power ceased to have any meaning. Nor was there any reason to over-emphasize the political difference between the States and the Provinces. There was nothing incompatible between the systems of governance in the Provinces and the States provided the supremacy of the common popular interests was recognised and representative and responsible Governments were established in the States.

8 India was, then, not only a geographical and cultural continuum but also one economic and political entity. The problem of statesmanship in that case could not merely be to hold the two Indias together. The real problem was how to bring about a clearer appreciation on the part of all political elements in India that they were heirs to the heritage of the common culture of India, and how to weld the States and the Provinces together in a joint endeavour to raise India to her full stature.

9 On 3rd June, 1947, the plan for the partition of India was announced and accepted by the principal political parties in India. The period of one year following that fateful day will go down as a most momentous one in India's history not only because it was during this year that India attained her freedom but also because it has witnessed a mighty interplay of two powerful forces. One has been the disruptive force of communal exclusiveness which has led to the secession from India of certain parts of this country and their constitution into an independent State. The other has been the revitalising and uniting force of enlightened mutual interests in a free and resurgent India which has swept away the barriers that separated the Indian States and the Provinces. How, in balance, one process has set off the other is for the future to unfold.

10 During the recent months a tremendous change has come over the Indian States. This change has been brought about by a process of two fold integration, firstly consolidation into sizeable and viable administrative units and, secondly, growth of democratic institutions and responsible governments. This bloodless revolution has been brought about on the one hand by the operation of democratic forces unleashed by freedom and, on the other, by the patriotic attitude of the Rulers who have been quick to appreciate the change.

11 It has been the policy of the Government of India to appropriate the sentiments and the wishes of the people and the sense of public service and patriotism of the Rulers, towards the attainment of the objective that they have had before themselves, namely the integration of the Provinces and the States in a strong and united India in which the peoples of the States and the Provinces would partake in the fullest measure in the enjoyment of the fruits of freedom.

12 The purpose of this White Paper is to present information, backed by documents regarding the policy of the Government of India towards the Indian States and the developments that have taken place in respect of the States since 5th July 1947, when the States Department of the Government of India was set up. An analysis of the historical and political background of the problem of the States will be helpful in taking stock of the great change that has come over them during the recent months. This is contained in the first two of the four parts into which this White Paper is divided. The first part gives statistics about the States and outlines their position under the Paramountcy of the British Crown. The second part surveys the course of developments since the promulgation of the Government of India Act, 1935, till the Statement issued by His Majesty's Government on 3rd June, 1947. The third part deals with the events leading up to the accession of the States to the Dominion of India. The fourth part deals with subsequent developments in the direction of the integration and democratisation of the States.

13 The White Paper surveys the political trends and developments in respect of the Indian States generally, it does not deal with the States of Hyderabad, Kashmir and Junagadh, where the course of events has been affected by special factors.

PART I

INDIAN STATES UNDER PARAMOUNTCY OF THE BRITISH CROWN
GENERAL SURVEY

INDIAN STATES

1 Sub Section (1) of Section 311 of the Government of India Act 1935 which has now been omitted defined 'Indian State' as including any territory whether described as a State an Estate a Jagir or otherwise belonging to or under the suzerainty of a Ruler who is under the suzerainty of His Majesty and not being a part of British India. In political practice the term applied to a political community occupying a territory in India of defined boundaries and subject to a common Ruler who enjoyed or exercised as belonging to him any of the functions and attributes of internal sovereignty duly recognised by the Paramount Power.

2 The Butler Committee and the Simon Commission applied this elastic term to 562 units whereas the Joint Committee on Indian Constitutional Reforms referred to 600 units as States. The term covered at one end of the scale units like Hyderabad and Kashmir which were of the size of the United Kingdom and at the other end minute holdings in Kathiawar extending only to a few acres.*

3 Out of the total area enclosed within the territories of pre Partition India i.e. 15 81 410 square miles the Indian States covered an area of 7 15 964 square miles which constituted about 45% of the total Indian territories. In post Partition India the area covered by the States geographically contiguous to India was reduced to 5 87 989 square miles being about 48% of the total area of the Dominion of India viz. 12 20 099 square miles. The Kashmir State with a territory of 84 471 square miles and the Hyderabad State closely following it with a territory of 82 813 square miles constituted the largest territorial units amongst the States. There were 15 States which had territories of more than 10 000 square miles and 67 having territories ranging from 1 000 to 10 000 square miles. There were 202 States having each an area of less than 10 square miles†.

4 The total population of the States according to the census figures of 1941 was 9 31 89 233 constituting about 24% of the total population of pre Partition India namely 38 89 97 255 after Partition the total population of the Dominion of India was reduced to 31 89 12 506 and of the States within the geographical orbit of the Indian Dominion to 8 88 064 84 changing the relative population ratio of the States from 24% to 27%.

5 In pre Partition India 16 States had a population of over one million. These 16 States plus 4 others with a population of more than 750 000 ~~only but less than a million were assigned~~ and ~~indirect~~ representation in the Constituent Assembly. These 20 States claimed 60 seats in the Constituent Assembly as against 33 seats assigned to the rest of the States. Of these 20 States 11 were entitled to send two or more representatives. Of the rest 13 had a population between five and seven and a half lakhs. The remainder of the 140 States which were members of the Chamber of Princes in their own right had a population ranging from 25 000 to 5 00 000.

6 The distribution of principal communities over the territories of the States in post-Partition India showed that 27% and 28% respectively of the total population of Hindus (including Scheduled Castes) and Muslims were to be found in the States. In the case of the Sikhs and Indian Christians however the percentage was much higher in that the States claimed 50%.

*A statement showing area and population of the Indian States is appended (Appendix II).

†Figures of area and population are based on the Statistical Handbooks published by the Constituent Assembly.

of the Indian Christians and 86% of the Sikhs residing in the Dominion of India. The corresponding figures for pre Partition India were Hindus 25% Muslims 16% Indian Christians 46% and Sikhs 27%.

7 The revenues of the States which in numerous cases did not reflect their relative areas and population showed equal disparity. According to the latest figures available for three years average annual revenue of the States 19 States had a revenue of rupees one crore or more a year seven had revenue ranging between fifty lakhs to one crore and this figure descended gradually till in the case of petty principalities it showed a revenue approximating to an artisan's average wages.

HISTORICAL SURVEY

8 Historically the main common feature that distinguished the States from the Provinces was that the States unlike the Provinces had not been annexed by the British Power. In their individual origin however the evolution and growth of States represented different processes. Firstly there were the old established States such as those in Rajputana which were in existence before the main waves of foreign invasion took place. Another class consisted mainly of the States with Muslim dynasties which were founded by the nobles or the Viceroy's of the invading foreign Emperors. Thirdly there were the States which emerged in the period of decline of the Moghul power and prior to the final stages of the consolidation of the British territory. Then there were the newer States which the British recognised during the final period of consolidation. Only one State namely Benares was set up and recognised since the assumption of the Government of India by the Crown.

GEOGRAPHICAL SURVEY

9 Geographically the States were scattered over every portion of the map of India. The yellow and pink map of pre Partition India (Appendix I) showed the Baluchistan States and the States of Kashmir and Sikkim (the last one sometimes shown in pale green to indicate that unlike other States it was under the External Affairs Department) on the frontiers of India. It showed in the north east Cooch Behar enclosed within the territories of the Bengal Province and the Manipur State surrounded by the territories of the Province of Assam. Southwards in the eastern portion of India the next block of Indian State territory was to be found in a chain of small States which were known as the Chattisgarh and Orissa States. Further south figured the States of Hyderabad and Mysore the latter a unit larger than the Irish Free State and having twice its population. Facing the Indian Ocean farther southwards still were the two densely populated States of Cochin and Travancore. Northwards up the west coast and both on the coast and inland were to be found various States mainly of the Mahratta period the largest of these being Kolhapur. The chain of States ended with the State of Baroda made up of several separate areas to the north of Bombay Presidency. Further to the north west lay the extremely numerous assemblage of States and Estates included in the Western India States Agency of which the better known were Kutch, Nawanganar, Bhavnagar and Junagadh. To the north east of Bombay separating Bombay and the Central Provinces from the United Provinces lay the main mass of Central India States which included Gwalior, Indore and Rewa. The northern and north western portion of Bombay was divided from the Punjab by the wide strip of Rajputana States. Among the States of this group which constituted the largest unit of the Indian States were the important Rajputana States of Bikaner, Jaipur, Jodhpur and Udaipur. In the United Provinces were to be found the isolated States of Tehri, Garhwal, Rampur and Benares. In the north west were the Punjab States including Patiala stretching up to Simla and the States of Jind, Nabha and Kapurthala, and a number of smaller States. Further west appeared the State of Bahawalpur. The State of Khairpur lay in the geographical orbit of Sind.

POLITICAL DIVERSITY OF STATES ✓

10 The internal administration of the States and their political set up varied greatly. There was a very wide difference in the degree of administrative efficiency reached by the most advanced and the most backward. According to the information circulated by the Chamber of Princes in 1946 over 60 States had set up some form of legislative bodies. In several others schemes for associating people with the governance of their States were under consideration. In most of the cases the development of representative institutions did not approximate to the growth of self governing institutions in the Provinces, which were on the threshold of complete freedom. However everywhere there was a growing consciousness of the rights and liberties of the people and a new spirit was abroad.

THREE CATEGORIES OF STATES ✓

11 According to the Butler Committee the Indian States as they existed could be classified into three distinct categories —

- (i) States the Rulers of which were members of the Chamber of Princes in their own right 108 in number
- (ii) States, the Rulers of which were represented in the Chamber of Princes by 12 members of their Order elected by themselves 127 in number
- (iii) Estates Jagirs and others 327 in number

The first category included the Ruling Princes who enjoyed permanent dynastic salute of 11 guns or more together with other Rulers of the States who exercised such full or practically full internal powers as in the opinion of the Viceroy, qualified them for individual admission to the Chamber. As a result of fresh admissions the membership of the Chamber was enlarged to 140 States.

THE CHAMBER OF PRINCES

12 The Chamber was a deliberative consultative and advisory body which was brought into being by a Royal Proclamation on 8th February, 1921. The establishment of the Chamber did not affect the individual relations between any State and the Representative of the Crown, but it involved a deviation from the earlier policy under which the Crown discouraged joint action and deliberation between the Indian States.

TREATIES, ENGAGEMENTS AND SANADS ✓

13 There were 40 States which had treaties with the Paramount Power. A larger number of States had some form of engagements or Sanads, i.e., acknowledgment of concession or authority or privileges generally coupled with conditions proceeding from the Paramount Power. The remainder enjoyed in some form or other recognition of their status by the Crown. More than 2/3rds of the population of Indian States was to be found in the States governed by treaties.

14 The Treaties Engagements and Sanads covered a wide field. The more important of them related to mutual amity and defensive alliance. These generally provided for territorial integrity, internal sovereignty and protection of States, prohibition of external intercourse and mutual aggression the right of the British Government to advise in certain circumstances and tributes if any

15 A number of them dealt with allied matters such as exchange cession and gift of territories cession of jurisdiction for railway and other purposes cantonments and Imperial Service troops

16 The Treaties dealing with important financial and economic matters included Postal and Postal Conventions Currency and coinage arrangements engagements for opium Salt agreements arrangements for exchange of postal correspondence telegraph and telephone lines

17 Lastly there were miscellaneous agreements such as those relating to certain trade arrangements construction of canals leasing of forests and construction of waterways

18 The rights and obligations of the States arising out of these agreements varied from State to State Thus for instance so far as the arrangements for exchange of postal correspondence were concerned five States were entitled to maintain separate postal system and they had Conventions with the Government of India which provided inter alia for mutual exchange of correspondence parcels money orders etc Ten other States were entitled to maintain a separate postal system but had no postal agreements with the Government of India Twenty seven States were entitled to receive service stamps free of cost In six States official correspondence passing within the State and intended for delivery within it was carried free of charge by the Postal Department of the Government of India

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE PARAMOUNT POWER AND THE INDIAN STATES

19 The paramountcy of the British Crown was not so extensive with the rights of the Crown flowing from the Treaties It was based on Treaties Engagements Sanads as supplemented by usage and sufferance and by decisions of the Government of India and the Secretary of State embodied in political practice The rights that the Paramount Power claimed in exercise of the functions of the Crown in relation to the States covered matters both external and internal

20 For external purposes State territory and the State subjects were in the same position as British territory and British subjects The States had no international life and in consequence of the loss by them of their power of negotiation and legation the paramount power had the exclusive authority of making peace or war or negotiating or communicating with foreign States The rights and duties assumed by the Paramount Power in regard to external affairs carried with them consequential rights and duties The Paramount Power was responsible for implementing its international commitments the Princes were required to give effect to the international obligations entered into by the Paramount Power

21 The right of intervention in the internal affairs could be exercised for the benefit of the Ruler of the State of India as a whole or for giving effect to international commitments The authority of the Paramount Power could thus be interposed inter alia for the prevention of dismemberment of a State the suppression of a rebellion against the lawful sovereign the prevention of gross misrule the economic growth of the whole of India checking inhuman practices or offences against natural law or public morality

22 The Paramount Power was responsible for the defence of both British India and the Indian States and exercised full control over all matters connected with defence, such as the establishment of cantonments, the regulation of the strength of the armed forces of the States, the procurement of supplies free passage of troops supply of arms and ammunition etc

23 Lastly the Paramount Power claimed certain important rights as derived from the Royal Prerogative These included the exclusive right to settle precedence and to grant honours, to regulate ceremonies, to recognise all successions and to settle disputes as to succession, to impose or remit nazarana or succession duties, to take charge of the States of minors and to provide for their education, and to impose the duty of loyalty to the Crown

24 Paramountcy thus made serious incursions into the internal sovereignty of the States and it was natural that the Rulers should seek codification of the political practice The appointment of the Indian States Committee in 1927 to report upon the relationship between the Paramount Power and the Indian States was an outcome of these efforts The Committee however found it impossible to evolve a formula which would cover the exercise of Paramountcy It expressed the view that "Paramountcy must remain paramount, it must fulfill its obligations, defining or adapting itself according to the shifting necessities of the time and the progressive development of the States"

Such was the political set up of the Indian States under the Paramountcy of the British Crown

PART II

THE STATES UNDER THE SCHEME OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935 AND SUBSEQUENT PLANS FOR INDIA'S CONSTITUTIONAL ADVANCEMENT

FEDERAL SCHEME

25 The Federal Scheme embodied in the Government of India Act, 1935 was the first effort to provide for a constitutional relationship between the Indian States and the Government of India on a federal basis One of the special features of this scheme was that, whereas in the case of the Provinces accession to the federation was to be automatic in the case of the States accession was to be voluntary and the establishment of the contemplated federation was conditional on the accession of States entitled to fill not less than 52 seats of the Council of State, and having an aggregate population of not less than one half of the total population of the States

26 The accession was to be effected by the King's acceptance of an Instrument of Accession, the terms of which made it clear that the Act asserted no authority over the State save such as flowed from the Ruler's freely executed Instrument In the extra federal field the paramountcy of the British Crown was to continue

27 The Instrument which was to be the overriding document was to govern the accession and had to specify the matters on which the Federal Legislature was to have power to legislate for the State and any limitations subject to which the legislative and executive power of the federation was to be exercised in relation to that State

28 The Instruments were to provide that a number of provisions of the Act, which were specified in the Second Schedule to the Act might be amended without affecting the accession of the States, but no such amendment was to extend unless accepted by the Rulers concerned by means of supplementary Instruments, the functions exercised by any federal authority in respect of the States. Thus apparently any change in the basic structure of the federation or any amendment materially altering such provisions as those relating to the position of the Governor General in respect of External Affairs and Defence would have affected the accession of the States. From the point of view of the progressive public opinion in British India, these provisions seemed to rule out completely the transfer of responsibility at the Centre.

29 It was not obligatory for the King to accept any Instrument. In fact, it was provided that no Instrument would be accepted, the terms of which were inconsistent with the scheme of the federation embodied in the Act.

30 An important feature of this scheme was that the proposed federation was to be composed of disparate constituent units in which the powers and authority of the Central Government were to differ as between one constituent unit and another. This anomaly was sought to be justified on the ground that it was only by limiting the content of the accession of the States, which had enjoyed a considerable measure of internal sovereignty, that they could be brought into a constitutional relationship with the Government of India. It was urged that the measure of unity that could be conferred by an all India federation would bring added strength, stability and prosperity to India as a whole and would outweigh the disadvantages of its anomalies and imperfections.

31 The promulgation of the Act of 1935 was followed by protracted negotiations during the course of which the draft of the Instrument of Accession underwent several changes. However, till September 1939 when the suspension of negotiations in that behalf was announced, the establishment of the contemplated federation was not in sight. To the Princes much of the essence of federation appeared to turn out to be the negation of all to which they had been accustomed. Their approach to the problem was governed by the view that their accession to federation involved a process of levelling down so far as their internal sovereignty was concerned, as against the Provinces which were to be levelled up as autonomous units and that, therefore, the Provinces and States could not be treated alike. On the other hand, progressive public opinion in British India hardened against the apparent effort of the Princes to whittle down the content of their accession to a farce, as also against such reactionary features of the federal scheme as the installation of dyarchy at the Centre in the form of the reserved subjects in the hands of the Governor General. In the meantime, the Muslim League veered round to a position of determined hostility to all constitutional plans which envisaged a common centre for the whole of India. Denounced by the main political elements in India for diverse reasons, the federal scheme of 1935 died unhonoured and unused.

CRIPPS PLAN

32 With the abandonment of the federal scheme which was announced by Lord Linlithgow on 11th September, 1939, the power to veto responsibility at the Centre which had virtually vested in the Rulers of Indian States, passed out of their hands. This was evident from the position that was assigned to the States in the next important announcement on the constitutional set up of India viz, the draft declaration known as the Cripps Plan.

33 The immediate purpose of the Cripps Mission was to induce the British Indian Party leaders to agree to share the responsibilities of the Central Government in which the States were not required to participate. The main reason for proposing the scheme for constitution making was to promote such an agreement. The draft Declaration therefore primarily concerned itself with British India. It promised the non seceding Provinces if they so desired the same full status as the Indian Union but as regards the States it only stated that, whether or not a State adhered to the new Constitution it would be necessary to negotiate a revision of its treaty arrangements so far as they may be required in the new situation.

84 The Cripps Plan as it stood seemed to differentiate between the Provinces and the States in applying the principle of non adherence. Attention to this apparent discrepancy was drawn in a memorandum submitted to Sir Stafford Cripps by the Delegation of Indian States in which it was urged that non adhering States or a group of States should have the right to form a Union of their own with full sovereign status in accordance with a suitable and agreed procedure for the purpose. It was emphasised on behalf of the States Delegation that the existence of such a provision, which would place the States at par with the Province for constitutional relations, need not necessarily lead to the setting up of a separate Union or Unions of the Indian States. In fact it was stated that the Indian States would make their fullest contribution towards evolving an Indian Union acceptable to them and to other Units in India. Sir Stafford Cripps told the States Delegation that the contingency of a separate Union or Unions of the States had not been considered in connection with the Draft Declaration but he personally did not see any fundamental impossibility in the suggestion.

85 The Cripps Plan accepted the principle of self determination but it was full of snags which imperilled the future of India. Even more unsatisfactory than the picture of the future that the Plan contained was its niggardly and halting approach to the present. The failure of the Cripps Mission gave new turn to India's political struggle.

SIMLA CONFERENCE OF 1945

86 In spite of the deepening crisis of the war no further serious effort was made to resolve the political deadlock in India until the Simla Conference of 1945. In view of its limited objective the States were not invited to this Conference. It turned out to be no more than a full dress rehearsal of the Cripps drama, the usual series of conferences, an occasional flicker of hope, the final veto of communal intransigence and a trail of bitterness and frustration.

CABINET MISSION'S PLAN

87 The assumption of power by Labour in England, the increasing international complications, the aftermath of the war and the growing realisation of the fact that it was impossible to keep under subjection four hundred millions of exasperated people brought about a change in the British policy towards India. A Parliamentary Delegation visited India in 1945-46 to gain first hand knowledge of the political situation in this country. On 19th February 1946 the Secretary of State for India Lord Pethick Lawrence announced his Government's decision to send a delegation of three Cabinet Ministers to India.

88 The Cabinet Mission which consisted of Lord Pethick Lawrence, Sir Stafford Cripps and Mr. A. V. Alexander arrived in India on 23rd March 1946. In earlier announcements the States had been assured that there was no intention on the part of the Crown to initiate any change in their relationship with the Crown without their consent. It was however expected that the consent of the Princes to any changes which might emerge as a result of negotiations would not be unreasonably withheld. In his letter to the Chancellor of the Chamber of Princes dated

12th May, 1946, Lord Wavell repeated the assurance, that there was no intention of making proposals for the entry of States into the Indian set up on any basis other than of negotiation

39 On 12th May, 1946 the Cabinet Mission issued the Memorandum in regard to States Treaties and Paramountcy (Appendix III), it affirmed that the rights of the States which flowed from their relationship with the Crown would no longer exist and that the rights surrendered by the States to the Paramount Power would return to the States. The void caused by the lapse of Paramountcy was suggested to be filled either by the States entering into a federal relationship with the successor Government or Governments in British India or by entering into particular political arrangements with it or them. The memorandum also referred to the desirability of the States in suitable cases forming or joining administrative units large enough to enable them to be fitted into the constitutional structure as also of conducting negotiations with British India in regard to the future regulation of matters of common concern specially in the economic and financial field.

40 The Cabinet Mission's Plan announced on 16th May, 1946, (Appendix IV), provided for the entry of the States into the proposed Union of India in the following manner —

(a) Paramountcy could neither be retained by the British Crown nor transferred to the new Government. But according to the assurance given by the Rulers that they were ready and willing to do so the States were expected to co operate in the new development of India.

(b) The precise form which the co operation of the States would take must be a matter for negotiation during the building up of the new constitutional structure and it by no means followed that it would be identical for all the States.

(c) The States were to retain all subjects and powers other than those ceded to the Union namely Foreign Affairs Defence and Communications.

(d) In the preliminary stage the States were to be represented on the Constituent Assembly by a Negotiating Committee.

(e) In the final Constituent Assembly they were to have appropriate representation not exceeding 93 seats the method of selection was to be determined by consultation.

(f) After the Provincial and Group Constitutions had been drawn up by the three Sections of the Constituent Assembly the representatives of the Sections and the Indian States would reassemble for the purpose of settling the Union constitution.

The Plan did not deal with the States in detail and its vague provisions regarding the association of the States with the Constituent Assembly caused some difficulty as regards the stage at which they could come in as regular members of the Constituent Assembly.

41 In its Resolution dated 24th May 1946 the Congress Working Committee expressed the view that the Constituent Assembly could not be formed by entirely separate elements and the manner of selecting States representatives for the Constituent Assembly must approximate in so far as was possible to the method adopted in the Provinces. However in the Press Statement issued by the Cabinet Mission on 20th May 1946 it was reaffirmed that the question of how the States representatives should be appointed to the Constituent Assembly was not a matter for decision by the Cabinet Mission and was clearly one which must be discussed with the States.

42 In his Statement before the House of Lords on 18th July, 1946, Lord Pethick Lawrence repeated the assurance that it was for the States freely to come in or not as they chose. In a statement made before the House of Commons on 18th July, 1946, Sir Stafford Cripps stated that there would have to be close negotiations between the Negotiating Committee which the States had set up and the major British Indian parties both as to the representation of the States in the Constituent Assembly and as to their ultimate position in the Union.

43 The Standing Committee of the Chamber of Princes in its Statement dated 10th June 1946 expressed the view that the Plan provided a fair basis for negotiations and subsequently set up a representative committee to negotiate the States' entry into the Constituent Assembly.

44 By a resolution passed on 21st December 1946 the Constituent Assembly appointed a Committee to confer with the Negotiating Committee set up by the Chamber of Princes for the purpose of —

(a) fixing the distribution of the seats in the Assembly not exceeding 93 in number which in the Cabinet Mission's Statement of 16th May, 1946 are reserved for Indian States

(b) fixing the method by which the representatives of the States should be returned to the Assembly.

45 The settlement arrived at between the two Committees is embodied in the report, dated 17th April 1947 of the Committee appointed by the Constituent Assembly.

During the course of the negotiations between the two Committees it was suggested that His Majesty's Government's Statement of 20th February 1947 had introduced an additional element of urgency and that it would be helpful if the States' representatives joined the Assembly during the April 1947 session. Although the States' Negotiating Committee expressed its inability to adopt such a course in the absence of a mandate from the General Conference of Rulers, the representatives of the States of Baroda, Cochin, Jaipur, Jodhpur, Bikaner, Patiala and Rewa took their seats in the Constituent Assembly on 29th April 1947. With the exclusion of the States that have gone over to Pakistan, the States' representation on the Constituent Assembly was reduced from 93 to 90 seats. Of these 54 seats have been filled. Of the States which have been allotted individual representation and which have acceded to the Dominion of India, all States except Kashmir, Bhopal and Travancore have sent their representatives. Hyderabad has not yet acceded to the Dominion and has therefore not agreed to send any representatives. Representatives have been returned by all the Groups though certain States in some of them did not participate in their selection.

HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT'S STATEMENT OF 3RD JUNE, 1947

47 His Majesty's Government's Statement of 3rd June 1947, which superseded the Cabinet Mission's Plan of 16th May 1946 contained the following reference to the States —

'His Majesty's Government wish to make it clear that the decisions announced above relate only to British India and that their policy towards Indian States, contained in the Cabinet Mission Memorandum of 12th May 1946 remains unchanged.

48 This Statement was accepted by both the Congress and the Muslim League and formed the basis of the method of the transfer of power to the successor Governments.

PART III.

ACCESSION OF THE STATES TO THE DOMINION OF INDIA

LAPSE OF PARAMOUNTCY

49 Till the lapse of Paramountcy, the Crown as represented by and operating through the Political authorities provided the nexus between the Indian States and the Central and Provincial Governments. The pivot of this arrangement was the Viceroy, who represented to the Indian States the suzerainty of the British Crown while at the same time he was, in relation to British India, the head of the Government. The Indian Independence Act released the States from all their obligations to the Crown and it was evident that it in consequence the Indian States became separate independent entities. There would be a serious administrative vacuum not only with regard to the political relationship between the Central Government and the States but also in respect of the co-ordination of all India policies in the economic and other fields. All that the Dominion Government inherited from the Paramount Power was the proviso to Section 7 of the Indian Independence Act, which provided for the continuance until denounced by either of the parties, of agreements between the Indian States and the Central and Provincial Governments in regard to specified matters, such as Customs Posts and Telegraphs, etc (Appendix V)

✓ STATES DEPARTMENT

50. It was against this background that the Government of India decided to set up a Department to conduct the relations with the States in matters of common concern

51 On 13th June, 1947 His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Mountbatten invited Pandit Nehru, Sardar Patel and Acharya Kripalani (on behalf of the Congress), Mr Jinnah Mr Liaquat Ali Khan, and Sardar Nishtar (on behalf of the Muslim League), and Sardar Baldev Singh (on behalf of the Sikhs), to attend an informal meeting to discuss the problem of the States. Sir Conrad Corfield (Political Adviser) was also present. Among the agreed conclusions reached at this meeting was the following —

That it would be advantageous if the Government of India were to set up a new Department, possibly called the "States Department" to deal with matters of common concern with the States, that, if this were done, the new Department should be divided into two sections ready for the partition of the country, and that the existing Political Department and the Political Adviser should give all possible assistance and advice in the formation of this new Department "

52 The above conclusion was considered, in the form of a recommendation by the Cabinet of the Interim Government at its meeting on 25th June 1947 and the decision of the Cabinet in that behalf was announced in the Press Communiqué issued on 27th June 1947, which read —

In order that the successor Governments will each have an organisation to conduct its relations with the Indian States when the Political Department is wound up, His Excellency the Viceroy, in consultation with the Cabinet, has decided to create a new Department called the States Department to deal with matters arising between the Central Government and the Indian States. This Department will be in charge of Sardar Patel who will work in consultation with Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar

The new Department will be organised in such a way and its work so distributed that at the appropriate time it can be divided up between the two successor Governments without any dislocation

Mr V P Menon will be the Secretary of the new Department

Sardar Nishtar was thus nominated as the Muslim League member of the Interim Government to be consulted in the working of the new department Mr Ikramullah was appointed Joint Secretary of it It was intended that with effect from 15th August, 1947, they would hold charge of the States Department of Pakistan

NECESSITY OF A COMMON CENTRE ✓

53 The decision to partition India was a severe blow to the political and geographical integrity of India The unity of what was to be left as India after the partition, was so vital a necessity not only for the political strength, full economic development and cultural expression of the Indian people but also for facing the aftermath of the partition, that the Government of India could not view with equanimity any trifling with it The situation was indeed fraught with the gravest danger for as Professor R Coupland has put it India could live if its Muslim limbs in the north west and north east were amputated, but could it live without its heart? The first task to which the newly created States Department had to address itself, therefore, was the conserving of the heart of India This required a common centre for the whole country including the Indian States, able to function effectively in the Provinces and States alike in matters requiring all India action

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL'S STATEMENT OF 5TH JULY, 1947 ✓

54 On the day the States Department came into being i.e., 5th July 1947 the Hon ble Sardar Patel Member for States Department, issued an important statement (Appendix VI), defining the policy of the Government of India, in which he assured the States that no more was asked of them than accession on the three subjects of Defence, Foreign Affairs and Communications, in which the common interests of the country were involved and that their autonomous existence would be scrupulously respected He gave a further assurance that it would not be the policy of the States Department to conduct the relations with the States in any manner which savoured of the domination of one over the other, and that if there would be any domination, it would be the domination of mutual interests and welfare The Hon ble Member expressed the hope that the Indian States would bear in mind that the alternative to co operation in the general interest was anarchy and chaos which would overwhelm great and small in a common ruin if the States and Provinces were unable to act together in the minimum of common task

55 The Statement made by the Hon ble Member for the States Department was favourably received in the Princely circles and informal consultations which followed paved the ground for the negotiations leading up to the execution of the Instruments of Accession and Standstill Agreements

SPECIAL MEETING OF PRINCES ON 25TH JULY, 1947 ✓

56 The task of conducting negotiations with the Princes was entrusted by the Government of India to His Excellency Lord Mountbatten who then the Crown Representative His Excellency called a special meeting of the Chamber of Princes on 25th July, 1947 (Appendix any VII) The meeting had been convened originally to consider the formula regarding Standstill Agreements. However, the States Department considered the question of the accession of the States to the Dominion of India as one of vital importance and included the item in the agenda of the Conference. In the course of his address His Excellency advised the Rulers to accede to the appropriate Dominion in regard to three subjects of Defence External Affairs and Communications and assured them that their accession on these subjects would involve no financial liability and that in other matters there would be no encroachment on their internal sovereignty. At the end of the meeting His Excellency announced the personnel of the Negotiating Committee which was set up to negotiate on behalf of the States the terms of their accession to the Dominion of India.

✓ SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION OF NEGOTIATIONS

57 When one looked back upon the barren course of the infructuous negotiations in connection with the scheme embodied in the Act of 1935 it seemed an impossible task to finalise the accession of the States within a reasonable period, particularly when there was no sanction of the paramountcy behind the negotiations. It is worth quoting the Sapru Committee in this connection — the experience of the negotiations which Lord Linlithgow inaugurated and conducted between 1936 and 1939 do not encourage the hope that these consultations and investigations can be successfully concluded except with the exercise of infinite patience and after the lapse of several years. To hang up the federal Union of such units as are willing to federate until some State or a minimum number of States or the last hesitant State has agreed to accede would be a policy which is calculated to postpone indefinitely the elimination of foreign rule and the achievement of full self government.

The fact however that India stood on the threshold of freedom contributed greatly towards a more realistic approach to the problem than had been the case in the past. The impending transfer of full power to a National Government having the will and the sanction of the Indian people behind it, personal contact between the leaders of public opinion in India and the Rulers of States rendered possible by the withdrawal of the Paramount Power's previous policy of political isolation of States, and the patriotic lead given by some of the leading Princes enabled the Rulers of States to appreciate that it was both in the interest of their States and the country that the States should become actively associated with the Dominion Government instead of holding a watching brief as it were in the deliberations of the Constituent Assembly. With their valuable assistance and co-operation and the helpful efforts of Lord Mountbatten negotiations were concluded in a week's time and barring Hyderabad, Kashmir and Junagadh all the States in the geographical limits of India acceded to the Indian Dominion.

✓ INSTRUMENT OF ACCESSION

58 The Instruments of Accession executed by the Rulers (Appendix VIII) provided for the accession of States to the Dominion of India on the three subjects namely Defence External Affairs and Communications their content being as defined in Last I of Schedule VII to the Government of India Act, 1935. The Instrument of Accession formulated as a result of the discussions with the Princes was accepted only from the States which exercised full jurisdiction. The States, in respect of which the Crown Representative exercised certain powers and jurisdiction, signed Instruments of Accession which provided also for the exercise of similar powers and jurisdiction by the Dominion Government.

STANDSTILL AGREEMENTS ✓

59 Standstill Agreements the acceptance of which was made by the Government of India conditional on accession by the States concerned were also entered into between the Dominion Government and the acceding States. The Standstill Agreements (Appendix IX) provided for the continuance for the time being of all subsisting agreements and administrative arrangements in matters of common concern between the States and the Dominion of India or any part thereof.

SIGNIFICANCE OF CONSTITUTIONAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE INDIAN DOMINION AND THE STATES

60. The accession of the Indian States to the Dominion of India established a new and more organic relationship between the States and the Government of India. The constitutional link thus forged proved strong enough to bear the stress of the upheaval through which the country has had to pass and enabled the Government of India and the Governments of the States and the Provinces concerned to take concerted and co-ordinated action in relation to matters of common concern.

61 The accession of the States to the Dominion of India was a momentous event in India's history. The full significance of this important development can be appreciated only if it is viewed against its most unpropitious background. For over half a century the States had been a sealed book so far as the leaders of public opinion in British India were concerned. High walls of political isolation had been reared up and buttressed to prevent the infiltration of the urge for freedom and democracy into the Indian States. Disruptive tendencies had been sedulously cultivated and encouraged and proposals for not only one but several Rajasthans were in the air. There were not a few who nursed the hope that, overwhelmed by the combined weight of the partition of India and the disruption of the States, the Government of India would go under.

62 In the context of these heavy odds and handicaps the consummation of the idea of a federal India comprising both the Provinces and the States was not a mean achievement. For the first time, after hundreds of years, India became welded into a constitutional entity.

PART IV

INTEGRATION AND DEMOCRATIZATION OF STATES

63 The accession of the Indian States to the Dominion of India was the first phase of the process of fitting them into the constitutional structure of India. The second phase which has rapidly developed during the recent months has involved a process of two fold integration: external integration, i.e., consolidation of small States into sizeable administrative units and inner integration, i.e., the growth of democratic institutions and responsible Governments in the States.

PROBLEM OF SMALLER STATES ✓

64 The small State has been the most vulnerable link in the chain of the Indian States. In 1933 the problem of consolidating some of the small States into local confederacies for the purpose of not only remedying their administrative deficiency but also facilitating their inclusion in any federal arrangements applicable to India as a whole was considered but was eventually dropped as impracticable

65 In March 1939 Lord Linlithgow in his inaugural address to the Chamber of Princes stressed the desirability of the States with limited resources making arrangements for co-operative grouping for administrative purposes. The subject thereafter figured in all Chamber discussions and led to various co-operative grouping arrangements in different regions but these arrangements generally did not go beyond providing for common High Courts and common advisory staff for the Police force

66 On 18th April 1943 the Political Department issued a communique announcing the attachment with certain larger States of the small Western India States which collectively covered an area of 7000 square miles with a population of 8 lakhs. It announced the important principle that nothing which was not inherently capable of survival should be artificially perpetuated, and that the ultimate test of fitness for the survival of any State was its capacity to secure the welfare of its subjects. All these half-hearted measures hardly touched the fringe of the problem and when the Government of the Dominion of India inherited this difficult legacy they were convinced that a more radical and realistic approach to the problem was clearly indicated

✓ POPULAR MOVEMENTS IN STATES

67 Hopes and aspirations, wrote the authors of the Montagu Chelmsford Report twenty nine years ago, may overlap frontier lines like sparks across a street. The events in the States since 15th August 1947 have borne out the truth of this statement

68 With the advent of independence, the popular urge in the States for attaining the same measure of freedom as was enjoyed by the people in the Provinces gained momentum and unleashed strong movements for the transfer of power from the Rulers to the people. The Rulers who were quick to appreciate the legitimate aspirations of their people gave them responsible Government

✕ MERGER OF ORISSA AND CHATTISGARH STATES

69 So far as the larger States are concerned the democratization of administration may be a satisfactory solution of their constitutional problem, however in the case of small States which are inherently incapable of survival as separate autonomous units responsible Government would only prove a farce. It was only to be expected therefore, that when popular movements started in small States, they would not be able even to maintain law and order. This was particularly evident in the Eastern State known as Chattisgarh and Orissa States. The law and order situation in some of these States was so bad as to constitute a threat to the peace and tranquility of the adjoining Provinces.

70 So far as the Orissa States were concerned the Orissa Sub Committee appointed by the Simon Commission which was presided over by Mr. Atlee had expressed the view that the Orissa federatory State should be brought into relationship with any administrative set up for Orissa. Subsequent Committees of inquiry relating to the setting up of Orissa as a separate Province were all of the opinion that the problem of Orissa States could not be divorced from that of the rest of the Province. These views were however did not find favour with the late Political Department and nothing was done to implement the recommendations for integrating the Orissa States with the Orissa Province. The problem of the Chattisgarh States which were geographically and linguistically linked with the Central Province was more or less identical with that of the Orissa States.

71 It was in the context of these events that in the second week of December 1947 the Hon'ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel visited Cuttack and Nagpur. The interests of the people no less than those of the Rulers of these States as also the wider interest of the country demanded a direct recourse to the obvious solution of the problem which had been delayed so long under the old régime. The National Government of free and democratic India could not temporize or tinker with an issue having so direct a bearing on the unification and planned economic progress of India. The Hon'ble Sardar Patel had long discussions with the Rulers of these States and it was eventually decided to integrate these small States with the adjoining Provinces. This important decision the implementation of which was facilitated by the very helpful attitude of the Rulers secured the foundation of the policy of the integration of the small States.

72 The Orissa and Chhattisgarh State numbering 39 covered an area of about 56 000 square miles with a revenue of Rs. two crores and a population of 7 millions. The agreements (Appendix X) signed by the Rulers of these States on 14th December 1947 and subsequent dates provide for the cession by them to the Dominion Government of full and exclusive authority jurisdiction and powers for and in relation to the governance of their States.

73 These as well as similar other agreements subsequently entered into whether providing for the merger of States into the Provinces of India or for the integration of the territories of States in larger Units guarantee to the Rulers concerned their succession Civil List personal property rights privileges dignities and titles. The Civil List that has been guaranteed is generally less than the percentage for the Deccan States under the award given by Dr. Rajendra Prasad. Shri Shanker Rao Dev and Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramanna. It is calculated on the basis of 15% on the first lakh of the average annual revenue of the State concerned 10% on 2 to 5 lakh and 7½% above 5 lakhs subject to a maximum of 10 lakhs.

74 The administration of these States was made over to the Governments of Orissa and the Central Provinces on 1st January 1948. The Ruler of the Central India State of Makrai also later signed a similar agreement and the administration of the State was integrated with that of the Central Provinces with effect from 1st February 1948. The 25 States which merged with Orissa under these arrangements included Seraikela and Kharsawan. On further consideration however it was realized that on account of the situation of these two States as island territories in Singhbhum district it was impossible for any Government other than that responsible for the administration of that District to administer them effectively. The Government of India accordingly took over from the Government of Orissa the administration of these States and made it over to the Government of Bihar on May 14th 1948.

HON'BLE STATES MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON POLICY OF INTEGRATION AND DEMOCRATIZATION

75 On 16th December 1947, the Hon'ble Minister for States issued statement (Appendix XI) explaining the background of the Agreement entered into with the Rulers of the Orissa and Chhattisgarh States in the course of which he stressed the following important point —

- (a) Democratization of the administration which had long been the keynote of the Congress policy towards the State had become a pressing problem since 15th August

- (b) Democracy and democratic institutions could function efficiently only where the Unit to which these were applied could subsist in a fairly autonomous existence. Where on account of smallness of its size isolation of its situation and inadequacy of its resources a State was unable to afford a modern system of Government both democratization and integration were clearly and unmistakably indicated.

MERGER OF DECCAN STATES

76 The merger of the Eastern States gave an impetus to the people of other States with limited resources to seek a similar remedy for their difficulties. The Deccan States which had previously decided to merge their sovereignty in the proposed United Deccan State now decided in favour of the security that integration with a resourceful unit such as the Bombay Province could provide as against the hazards of separate existence as small units. They signed merger agreements on 19th February, 1948 and subsequent dates. The other States signed similar agreements and all States in Deccan except Kolhapur have been administratively integrated with the Province of Bombay. The seventeen Deccan States that have thus merged in Bombay covered an area of 7 651 square miles with a population of about 17 lakhs and a revenue of about Rs. one crore and forty two lakhs.

MERGER OF GUJARAT STATES

77 Another group of States that has merged with the Bombay Province consists of the Gujarat States. The fact that the northernmost of these States namely Palanpur Sirohi and Radhanpur are situated close to the Indian border made it essential that a stable and efficient administration should be established in this area. The formation of a Union of the Gujarat States by themselves had to be ruled out on account of the fact that these States united together would not have constituted a viable unit. Geographically the territories of these States are interlaced and interspersed with the Baroda State territories and the Ahmedabad and Kheda Districts of Bombay. Lack of geographical cohesion also rendered it difficult to unite and integrate the territories of these States into one unit. The second alternative of the formation of a Union of these States with the neighbouring State of Baroda had also to be ruled out because of geographical difficulties as also on account of the unwillingness of the Ruler of Baroda which is a viable unit by itself to merge Baroda's identity into a Union composed of all the Gujarat States. After prolonged discussions in Bombay on 17th March 1948 the Rulers of the jurisdictional Gujarat States agreed that merger with the Bombay Province was the only solution of their constitutional problem. One distinguishing feature of the merger agreements signed by the Rulers of the Gujarat States on 19th March 1948 is the provision for a Council of Rulers on the model of the Council of Rulers in the United State of Kathiawar for deciding cases of disputed succession after reference of such cases to the High Court of Bombay and in accordance with the decisions of that Court. The total area covered by the States estates talukas and thanas in Gujarat numbering 157 (or 289 if the units are subdivided according to the number of the share holders) is nearly 19 300 square miles with a population of about 27 lakhs and a total revenue of Rs. one crore and sixty five lakhs. The administration of these States was taken over by the Bombay Government on 10th June 1948.

78 The Dangs and certain estates formerly included in Vatrak Kantha Thana of the old Baroda Western and Gujarat States Agency, which covered an area of 870 square miles with a population of 48 498 became part of the Bombay Province under the Governor General's Order No 127 P dated 19th January 1948

MERGER OF OTHER SMALL STATES INTO PROVINCES

79 The other States that have merged with the neighbouring Province are Loharu Dujana and Patandri the Rulers of which signed on 17th February 3rd March and 18th March 1948 respectively agreements for merger of their States in the East Punjab. Similar agreements were signed by the Rulers of Banganapalle and Pudukkottai on 18th and 29th February 1948 respectively for their merger in the Madras Province

CONSOLIDATION OF EAST PUNJAB HILL STATES INTO A CENTRALLY ADMINISTERED UNIT

80 A number of Rulers and the Chiefs of the East Punjab Hill States signed on 8th March 1948 agreements ceding to the Dominion Government full and exclusive authority jurisdiction and power for and in relation to the governance of their States. Other Rulers signed similar agreements on subsequent dates. Having regard to the wishes of the Rulers and the people of the Hill States that the territories of these States should be consolidated into one unit and the desirability of making available to those areas man power and wealth power resources of a large administrative unit the Government of India have integrated these States into a centrally administered unit to be known as Himachal Pradesh. The new Province which comprises the territories of 21 Hill States with an area of 10 600 square miles a population of about 9½ lakhs and a revenue of about 85 lakhs came into being on 15th April 1948. The East Punjab Hill States included the State of Bilaspur. In view however of the location in this State of the contemplated Bakhra Dam which is a project of all India importance it has been decided to take over the State as a separate centrally administered area. The agreement in this behalf is likely to be finalised in the near future.

MERGER OF KUTCH

81 Another important State that has recently merged in the Dominion of India and is to be administered centrally under a Chief Commissioner is Kutch. This State has an area of 8 461 square miles with a population of a little over five lakhs and a total revenue of nearly Rs. 80 lakhs per annum. There were only two alternatives in regard to the future administration of Kutch namely —

- (a) integration of the State in the United State of Kathiawar, or
- (b) merger of the State in the Dominion of India.

Both these alternatives were carefully considered by the Government of India and it was decided to treat it at least for the time being as a centrally administered unit. This area has vast potentialities and its development will require considerable amount of money as well as technical assistance which the Kutch State by itself could not provide nor the newly formed State of Saurashtra at least for some time to come. An agreement was accordingly signed by the Ruler on 4th May 1948 ceding to the Dominion Government full and exclusive authority jurisdiction and power for and in relation to the governance of the State and providing for the transfer of the administration of the State on 1st of June 1948.

FORMATION OF UNIONS

82 The problem of the integration of the States, however, is not alike in all regions. There were several groups of States, which with due regard to the geographical, linguistic, social and cultural affinities of the people could be consolidated into sizeable and viable units. In such cases, it has been the policy of the Government of India to extend their full support and co-operation to the Rulers concerned in uniting and integrating the territories of their States in reasonable administrative units on the basis of full transfer of power from the Rulers to the people.

THE UNITED STATE OF KATHIAWAR (SAURASHTRA)

83 This form of consolidation of small States was first adopted in regard to the Kathiawar States which comprised 217 States, and estates (449 units if calculated on the basis of further fragmentation according to the number of share holders) with varying territories and jurisdictions. Many of these States had several scattered islands of territories and added together these States divided the map of Kathiawar into about 860 different areas. The scheme for the Union of Kathiawar States integrates all the Kathiawar States in a new State to be administered as a single block of territory. It provides for the complete transfer of power to the people of this region to be exercised by a Ministry responsible to a popular legislature. A special feature of the scheme is the provision for the Raj Pramukh who would be the constitutional head of the State and will be elected by the Council of Rulers. This arrangement, while ensuring close approximation of the system of governance in the States and the Provinces and of the rights and liberties of the people returns in some measure the traditional polity of the States. An interim popular Ministry was set up in this region and a provision has been made for a Constituent Assembly to frame a constitution for the new State within the framework of the Covenant and the Constitution of India. It has not been possible so far to integrate the Junagadh State in the United State of Kathiawar. This State is at present being administered by the Central Government, but it is intended to integrate it into the United State of Saurashtra after ascertaining the wishes of the people.

84 The scheme for the constitution of the new Kathiawar State to be known as 'Saurashtra' was finalized in the last week of January 1948. The Covenant (Appendix XII) was signed on 23rd January, 1948, and the new State came into being on 15th February, 1948, when it was inaugurated by the Hon'ble Sardar Patel. It covers an area of 31,885 square miles with a population of about 35,22,000 and a revenue of 8 crores.

OTHER UNIONS

85 The United State of Kathiawar has provided the model for similar Unions of States in other regions, namely the United States of (a) Matsya (b) Vindhya Pradesh (c) Rajasthan and (d) Gwalior Indore and Matwa and (e) the Patiala and East Punjab States Union.

THE UNITED STATE OF MATSYA

86 The United State of Matsya consists of the States of Alwar, Bharatpur, Dholpur, and Karauli. These States are all situated very near the Capital of India and any disturbances in these areas had repercussions in the contiguous districts of Gurgaon, Agri and Muntra. This danger became apparent during the communal disturbances in 1947-48. With the integration of these four States into a unit which covers a territory of 7,536 square miles with a population of 18,37,994 and a revenue of Rs 1,83,06,221, it has been possible to set up a responsible Government in this State. The Rulers of these States signed the Covenant on 28th February, 1948 (Appendix XIII). The new State came into existence on 18th March, 1948.

THE UNITED STATE OF VINDHYA PRADESH

87. The United State of Vindhya Pradesh comprises 35 Bundelkhar and Bagelkhand States. These States constitute a narrow corridor between the United Provinces and the Central Provinces. The area is rich in mineral resources and forest wealth, but constitutes one of the most undeveloped regions in Central India. This region is situated right in the Centre of the Indian Union and it is essential to set up a stable administration and to develop the means of communication in this area.

88. The Kathiawar model had to be modified in some respects to meet the special requirements of this region. Without the State of Rewa, this Union would not have been a viable one. The Ruler and the people of Rewa were willing to join the Union if certain concessions were made to ensure for the Rewa State and its Ruler a place commensurate with Rewa's importance. A provision has accordingly been made in the Covenant that in the Council of Rulers consisting of 19 members while all the members will have one vote each, the Ruler of Rewa will have 15 votes for the purposes of elections of the President and the Vice-President. A further provision* has been made to the effect that if 2/3rds of the representatives of the Rewa State in the Constituent Assembly voted within one month from the date of the first meeting of the Constituent Assembly in favour of opting out of the Union, the Covenant in so far as it affected Rewa would not be operative.

89. The Covenant (Appendix XIV) was signed by the Rulers on 18th March 1948, and the new State was inaugurated on 4th April 1948. The Union covers an area of 24,610 square miles, with a population of 85,69,455 and an annual revenue of about 2½ crores.

THE UNITED STATE OF RAJASTHAN

90. The Rajasthan Union was originally formed by the smaller Rajputana States in the south east, namely, Banswara (including Kushalgarh), Bundi, Dungarpur, Jhalawar, Kishengarh, Kotah, Pargabgarh, Shahpura and Tonk. These States formed a contiguous area with ethnical, linguistic and cultural affinities. The integration of these States in the contemplated United State of Malwa was also considered, but it was found that the natural affinity of these States was more with Rajputana than with Malwa. The territories of these nine States were accordingly united together to form the United State of Rajasthan with an area of 16,807 square miles, a population of 25,34,220 and an average annual revenue of Rs 1,91,39,000.

91. It was provided in the Covenant signed by the Rulers of these States that the Rulers of Kotah, Bundi and Dungarpur should be deemed to have been elected as the first President, senior Vice-President and junior Vice-President respectively and that the administrations of their States should be made over to the Raj Pramuks between 25th March and 15th April 1948. The United State of Rajasthan as thus constituted was inaugurated on 25th March 1948.

92. Subsequently intimation was received that the Ruler of Udaipur was willing to join the Rajasthan Union if he and his State were ensured their legitimate position in the Union. Having regard to the facts that the Udaipur State was entitled to stand by itself and that the resources of the State would greatly add to the strength of the Union it was decided to modify the Covenant in the following important respects —

- (a) The Maharana of Udaipur will be the Raj Pramukh during his life time
- (b) The Maharao of Kotah will be the senior Up Raj Pramukh
- (c) The Maharana of Udaipur's privy purse has been fixed at Rs. 10 lakhs. He will in addition receive a sum of Rs. 2 lakhs per year as consolidated allowance as Raj Pramukh. A further sum of Rs. 5 lakhs per annum will be paid to him out of the revenue of the United State for charitable and religious purposes

All the Rulers concerned signed the Covenant (Appendix XX) and the reconstituted Rajasthan Union was inaugurated by the Honble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru on 18th April 1948

THE UNITED STATE OF GWALIOR INDORE AND MALWA

33 The United State of Gwalior, Indore and Malwa (Madhya Bharat) constitutes the largest of the Unions of States so far formed. It comprises 20 States in Central India including the major States of Gwalior and Indore. These States consist of blocks of territory separated by intervening portions of other States. Linguistically, culturally, historically and economically the region forms a compact block. The position of the two major States of Gwalior and Indore which according to the Government of India's declared policy relating to viable units were entitled to stand by themselves rendered the problem of the integration of these States into one Union difficult. During the course of discussions it was found that there was a body of local opinion both at Gwalior and Indore opposed to the formation of one Union in which the identity of Gwalior and Indore would be completely merged. It was therefore suggested as a possible alternative to the single Union scheme that two unions might be formed, one around Gwalior and the other around Indore. After giving the proposal due consideration the Government of India felt that from the point of view of geographical integrity as well as administrative efficiency the balance of arguments as well as advantage was in favour of the immediate formation of one Union rather than two.

34 A conference of the Rulers of Central India was accordingly held in Delhi on 20th, 21st and 22nd of April 1946 and as a result of these discussions agreement was arrived at for the formation of one Union to be known as the United State of Gwalior, Indore and Malwa (Madhya Bharat). The following are some of the distinctive features of this scheme which have been provided to meet the special requirements of the two major States —

- (i) For the purposes of the election of the Raj Pramukh every Ruler will have such number of votes as is equal to the number of lakhs in the population of his State
- (ii) The Rulers of Gwalior and Indore will be the Raj Pramukh and the senior Up Raj Pramukh respectively during their life time
- (iii) The senior Up Raj Pramukh will also receive an appropriate allowance
- (iv) The privy purse of the Rulers of Gwalior and Indore has been fixed for the life time of the present Rulers at a figure higher than the maximum fixed in other cases

- (v) In Central India there are a number of States whose population is predominantly Bhal. The Bhils are extremely backward tribes and it was realised that it would be inexpedient to entrust them to the care of the new Government. It has therefore been decided to treat those States where more than 50% population is of Bhils as scheduled areas and to confer the authority to make laws for peace and good Government of these areas on the Raj Prammukh subject to any directions or instructions that may from time to time be given by the Government of India.
- (vi) It has been provided that until other provision is made by an act of the legislature of the United State the right to resume Jagirs and to recognise the succession to the rights and titles of the jagirdars will vest in the Raj Prammukh.
- (vii) The Rulers of Gwalior and Indore have been allowed to exercise their present powers of suspension, remission or commutation of death sentences in respect of any person sentenced to death for a capital offence committed within the territories of their respective States.

The Covenant (Appendix XVI) was signed by the Rulers present at the Conference on the 22nd April 1948. The Rulers of the co-terminous States are required by the Covenant to make over the administration of their States to the Raj Prammukh on or before the 1st day of July 1948. The new State was inaugurated on 28th May 1948 by the Honble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. It will comprise an area of 46,273 square miles with a population of over 71 lakhs and a revenue of about eight crores.

PATIALA AND EAST PUNJAB STATES UNION

95 The latest Union of States that has been decided upon is the one to be formed by the States in the East Punjab. The Covenant (Appendix XVII) for the formation of this Union was signed by the Rulers of the six salute States of Patiala, Kapurthala, Jind, Nabha, Faridkot, Malerkotla and the two non-salute States of Nalagarh and Kalsia on 5th May 1948.

96 These States lie in three separate blocks. The main block comprises the territories of the Patiala, Nabha, Jind, Malerkotla and Faridkot States in the heart of the East Punjab. It forms a fairly compact tract. The Kapurthala State consists of three enclaves in the Jullundur Division of the East Punjab. The outlying districts of Narnaul, Dadri and Bawal which form parts of the Patiala, Jind and Nabha States respectively lie within the geographical orbit of the southern districts of the East Punjab.

97 In view of the fact that the Patiala State, which has a population of about two million, had been recognised as a separate viable unit, it was contemplated at earlier stages to form a Union of the East Punjab States without Patiala. These States comprised an area of 3,693 square miles with a population of 13,66,283 and an annual revenue of about two crores. It was, however, realised that a Union of the East Punjab plain States without Patiala would not endure. Apart from their limited resources, the territories of these States are separated by intervening portions of the East Punjab and the Patiala State and in certain cases form islands separated from the main block of the States. From the point of view of territorial integrity, administrative efficiency and tapping of agricultural and other resources of these States, the formation of one Union inclusive of Patiala was clearly indicated. The Ruler of Patiala expressed willingness to join the Union provided the Patiala State and its Ruler were given a position in the Union commensurate with their relative importance. As a result of the adjustments made to reconcile the various points of view the following provisions have been made in the Covenant —

- (i) The present Rulers of Patiala and Kapurthala will respectively be the first Raj Pramukh and Up Raj Pramukh and will hold office during their life time
As in the case of the United State of Gwalior Indore and Malwa the Rulers of this Union will have for the purposes of election of the Raj Pramukh such number of votes as is equal to the number of lakhs in the population of their States. The Ruler of Patiala will not exercise his vote in the election of the Up Raj Pramukh
- (ii) The Union will be tentatively called Patiala and East Punjab States Union till the Constituent Assembly of the Union adopts a suitable name for it
- (iii) The two non salute States of Nalagarh and Kalsia will alternately hold one seat on the Council of Rulers

The inauguration of the Union has been fixed to take place on 15th July 1948 and it is expected that all the covenanting States will have transferred their administrations to the Raj Pramukh by 20th of August 1948. The new State will comprise an area of 10 119 square miles with a population of 34 24 060 and a revenue of about five crores.

EXECUTION OF FRESH INSTRUMENTS OF ACCESSION ON BEHALF OF THE UNIONS

98 An important development that has followed the formation of these Unions is the decision that has been taken recently for the execution of fresh Instruments of Accession on behalf of the Unions. The individual States joining these Unions had acceded to the Indian Dominion in respect of three subjects only, namely Defence External Affairs and Communications. The Government of India considered it desirable that the content of the accession of the States should be extended to enable them to be fitted into the new constitutional structure of India. Accordingly a permissive provision was made in the Covenant of the Rajasthan Union for approximating the Dominion's legislative jurisdiction over the Union to the Provincial level. In the Covenants for the formation of the United State of Madhya Bharat and the Patiala and East Punjab States Union this provision was made mandatory. With a view to securing the concurrence of the Governments of other Unions to the extension of similar legislative authority of the Dominion over these Unions a meeting of the Raj Pramukhs and Ministers of the United States of Kathiawar Rajasthan Vidhya Pradesh and Matsya was called on 6th May 1948. As a result of these discussions it was decided that the Raj Pramukhs of all the Unions should execute fresh Instruments of Accession (Appendix XVIII) in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 of the Government of India Act 1935 accepting as matters with respect to which the Dominion Legislature may make laws for the various Unions all entries in List I and List III of the Seventh Schedule to the Act except those relating to taxation. The execution of the new Instruments by the Raj Pramukhs will ensure constitutional uniformity between the various Unions and the Provinces composing the Indian Dominion in so far as the Central Legislative authority is concerned except in respect of the taxing powers of the Centre.

MERGER OF REMAINING SMALL STATES

99 There are still some small States left which have not been affected by any merger or integration schemes. It is the intention of the Government of India to integrate them in such manner as may be found appropriate with due regard to their geographical contiguity and linguistic administrative cultural and economic considerations.

BENEFITS OF ADMINISTRATIVE INTEGRATION

100 The benefits that the people of the small States will derive from the administrative integration of such States either in the form of their merger into larger units or their consolidation into sizeable units are manifold. The slenderness of the resources of small units hardly larger than estates but enjoying varying degrees of sovereignty and their general aversion to neighbourly co-operation put it beyond the powers of their Rulers to give their subjects the advantages of good government. Existence of a large number of small units led to unnecessary multiplication of governing agencies which necessitated the maintenance of numerous ornamental and dignified institutions. These States could never provide efficient services or maintain anything like modern standards of administration, continuance of separate governmental institutions in such States led only to the dissipation of national wealth. The integration of these units will enable them to pool their resources for the provision of adequate administrative services over reasonable groups or tracts for the general benefit of the people. It will also make it possible to provide adequate social services and modern amenities to the people of these States, which were beyond their resources as separate small units.

101 Because of the inadequacy of resources and the jurisdictional changes, communications in most of the small States have been in a very primitive condition. The internal trade was rendered difficult by the export import and other duties which the various States levied. The administration of justice and maintenance of law and order were greatly handicapped because of the administrative and political fragmentation resulting from the existence of a large number of small States. Each of these States had its own laws and taxation structure and the bewildering multiplicity of their revenue and other systems ruled out any kind of constitutional and administrative uniformity. These conditions encouraged extensive smuggling, black marketing, crime and other anti-social activities. In such a set-up any kind of co-ordinated development opening up of economic potentialities or any form of real progress was hardly possible. The administrative integration of a large number of small units has solved all these perplexing political and administrative problems. Thus for instance the formation of the United State of Saurashtra alone has swept away a whole network of customs barriers and has facilitated the negotiation of an agreement between the Government of India and the Saurashtra Government providing for the assumption by the Government of India of full control over the customs arrangements at the Kathiawar ports. In the new set up there should be no room for any feudal practices, special privileges of classes, immunities from taxation, judicial and quasi-judicial privileges, trade monopolies, and other inequities. The people of these areas can now look forward to the firm establishment of conditions in which they will secure good Government, adequate administrative and social services and enjoy full opportunities for progress and development.

THE TASK BEFORE THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE NEW UNIONS

102 The heavy responsibility of justifying the hopes implicit in integration rests mainly on the Governments of the new Unions. It is for them to follow up the inauguration of the new constitutional set up by a programme for the amelioration of the lot of the people and a system of good and sound administration. A common Government fully representative of the people of all the integrated States and earnestly endeavouring to reflect in its activity the wishes and sentiments of the people should operate as a powerful unifying and integrating force. Administrative integration of the States will fail to secure its objective if it does not bring about a psychological integration of the people. Local institutions of the people which impede the growth of common nationhood will be eliminated only if they are enabled to feel that by becoming citizens of bigger, more progressive and resourceful units a real change for the better has come into their lives. The people must feel that not only power has come to their hands but the very set up of their lives has undergone an appreciable change.

APPOINTMENT OF ADVISERS.

103 The old order in the States is changing the new will take some time to grow. The public services in some of the States may prove unable to bear the strain of modern administration. The popular Ministers untrained in administrative work may find it difficult to cope unaided with their onerous responsibilities. The Government of India have been keenly alive to the fact that if the new States are to play their legitimate role in building up a new order in the country the services of experienced administrators and experts should be made available to them to set the tone for the administration. The task of creating new integrated administrative machinery in the Unions which in the absence of past practice and conventions will continue for some time to be one of immense difficulty is engaging the Government of India's close and careful attention. The Government of India will watch carefully the progress of the Union States and extend to their Governments all possible assistance and help such as providing during the formative stage of the new States the necessary administrative talent in the form of Advisers and other expert officers.

POLICY TOWARDS MAJOR STATES.

104 There would still remain a number of major States unaffected by movement for merger or union. The policy of the Government of India in respect of them is enunciated in the following extract from a statement made on behalf of the Government of India in the Parliament on 15th March 1948 —

The States which have individual representation on the Constituent Assembly have been assured by the Government of India from time to time that they will be treated as separate viable units. In regard to them the Government of India's policy is clear and unequivocal. There is no desire on our part in any way to compel or coerce them into merger or integration. If they wish to remain as separate autonomous units we would have no objection but if Rulers and the people of any of these States desire to merge with the neighbouring Province or form a union with the neighbouring States on a voluntary basis obviously the Government of India cannot say 'No'. It is in this context that proposals for the formation of Malwa and Bundelkhand Units which involve States like Gwalior, Indore and Rewa should be judged. It is clear however that in these States which remain separate units there would be continuous popular pressure for the grant of full responsible government. I hope the Rulers of these States will appreciate the necessity of retaining the affection and goodwill of their subjects by timely concessions rather than futile resistance to popular demand. I hope this clear enunciation of our policy regarding these States will satisfy any misgivings that might have been created in the minds of Rulers of these States by the proposed inclusion of Gwalior and Indore in Malwa.

Unit and the inclusion of Alwar in the recently created Matsya State and of Rewa in the Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand Union. I am sure they will realise that whatever I have stated indicates no change in the policy of the Government of India in regard to the major States and the specific inclusion of these States in our draft Constitution would convince them further of our bona fides. Our policy in regard to them remains as I have stated earlier, their continued autonomous existence unless both the Rulers and the people desire otherwise.

FOUR FOLD DISPENSATION

105 It will be seen from the above that the following three different processes have been promoted and recognised by the Government of India in relation to the integration of States each being applied according to size, geography and other factors relating to each State or group of States.

106 The first is the merger of the States in the adjacent Provinces. Under this process 219 States with a total area of 84,774 square miles, population of 120.18 lakhs and revenue of 541.84 lakhs have merged in the Provinces distributed as under —

Province	Number of State merged	Area in sq miles	Population in lakhs	Revenue in lakhs
Oudha	23	23,437	40.4	93.74
C P and Bihar	15	41,710	25.84	86.31
Bihar	2	623	2.08	6.45
Madras	2	1,414	1.83	30.41
East Punjab	3	370	.80	10.38
Bombay	174	69,011	43.67	307.15
Total	219	84,774	120.18	541.84

107 The second is the consolidation of States into centrally administered areas. This process has so far affected 22 States consolidated into the following two units covering a total area of 19,061 square miles with a population of 14.37 lakhs and a revenue of about 164 lakhs —

Name of new area	Number of States merged	Area in sq miles	Population in lakhs	Revenue in lakhs
Himachal Pradesh	21	10,600	9.36	84.56
Kutch	1	8,461	5.01	80.00
TOTAL	22	19,061	14.37	164.56

108 The third is the integration of the territories of States to create new viable units. This process has so far covered a total area of 1,00,460 square miles with a population of 237.61 lakhs and a revenue of 2,819.45 lakhs distributed over the States of Saurashtra, Matsya, Vindhya Pradesh,

Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat and the Patiala and East Punjab States Union as under*—

State	Number of States merged	Area in sq miles	Population in lakhs	Revenue in lakhs
Saurashtra	217	31,885	35.22	800.00
Matsya ...	4	7,536	18.33	183.06
Vindhya Pradesh ..	35	24,610	35.69	243.50
Rajasthan ...	10	29,977	42.61	316.67
Madhya Bharat ...	20	46,273	71.50	776.42
Patiala and East Punjab States Union	8	10,119	31.24	500.00
Total	294	150,400	237.64	2,819.45

109 The States recognised as viable units and continuing as separate entities constitute a separate group *

ESSENTIAL COMMON FACTOR OF DEMOCRATIZATION

110 There is, however, one essential condition which the Government of India have attached to all schemes recognised by them relating to the future set-up of the States, namely, transfer of full power from the rulers to the people. They have firmly declined to be a party to any arrangements relating to the States unless they expressly provided for the establishment of responsible Government.

111 So far as the first two processes, namely, merger of the States in the Provinces or assumption of their administration by the Central Government, are concerned, transfer of power to the people is automatic in that the merging States become parts of administrative units which are governed by the popular Governments of the Provinces or the Centre. Till such time as these areas return their quota of members to the legislature concerned measures have been adopted to devise the association of the people of the States concerned with the Provincial administrations. As regards the third process, all the Covenants governing the constitution of the newly-created States expressly provide for full transfer of power to the people. Constitutions for these States are to be framed by popular Constituent Assemblies and till the new constitutions become operative, popular interim Administrations are to conduct the administration.

112 As for the larger States unaffected by the movement for merger or union, movements for full responsible Government have rapidly developed in them, and with the exception of the Hyderabad State, practically all of these States have either transferred power to the people or have made announcement for establishing full responsible Governments in the near future. The people of the major States in the south, namely, Cochin, Travancore and Mysore were the first to see the fruition of their efforts and to have popular Governments installed.

*A consolidated statement showing the area, population and revenue of States that have been either (a) merged into Provinces, or (b) consolidated into centrally administered areas, or (c) combined to form new Unions, is appended (Appendix XIX). The appendix also shows the area and population of (a) States recognised as viable units, and (b) non viable States not yet affected by any merger or integration schemes.

Interim popular Ministries have been set up in the States of Mayurbhanj, Jodhpur, Jaipur and Baroda. In Kashmir the popular leader, Sheikh Abdullah has been installed as the head of the first popular Government. Interim Ministries have also been formed in Bhopal and Bikaner. In the States in which there has so far been no agreement between the Ruler and the leaders of public opinion, the differences do not relate to the objective of reforms which is almost unanimously accepted as full responsible Government but to the time schedule and details, etc. It is obvious that it will be both unwise and futile on the part of the Rulers to withhold power from the people or to delay handing over responsibility to them. There is no reason to believe that the Rulers concerned will be lacking in the spirit of public service and in response to popular demands which members of their Order have shown elsewhere.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT ✓

113 The policy of the Government of India towards Indian States has been governed by the objective which they, as the first popular Government of the country, set before themselves, namely, the integration of all elements in this country in a free, united and democratic India. This objective could be attained only by a vigorous policy of integration and democratization of the States. That process has now nearly reached completion. In a remarkably short period it has revolutionized the inner and external set-up of the States. The process of the integration of the States into viable and sizeable units started with the elimination of the chain of small States that severed the Provinces of Orissa and Bihar from the Central Provinces, it solved the cross jurisdictional puzzle of the vast assemblage of the States of Kathiawar and how far it has simplified the problem of the States would be evident from the fact that as against 614 or so of the units known as States which existed about the middle of December, 1947, within a period of a month or two, the number of the States is likely to be even less than 1/25th of the original figure.*

114. Even more significant than the geographical changes that this bloodless revolution has brought about has been the complete transformation of the inner set-up of the States. When the paramountcy of the British Crown lapsed there were only a few States which had representative institutions, most of these were inchoate and illusory and had hardly gone beyond the Provincial legislatures under the Montagu Chelmsford Reforms. During recent months, however, practically every State has announced its intention to grant full responsible Government and in a vast majority of them power has already been transferred to the people.

115 The consummation of the new set up of the Indian States has involved protracted negotiations, perseverance and hard labour. The results that have so far achieved will lead to an immense simplification of the map of India. But for the patriotic co-operation of the Princes the tremendous change that has come over India for the mutual benefit of the people and the Rulers could not have been possible. By their ready appreciation of the aspirations of the people, they made integration of States in larger units, and transfer of power to the people, smooth and peaceful. They may well claim to be co-architects in building a free and democratic India in which the people of the Provinces and the people of the States will enjoy alike the full measure of freedom and march together as citizens of free India.

*A map of India showing the progress of political changes in relation to States is appended (Appendix XX)

APPENDIX III

CABINET MISSION SIMLA 12TH MAY 1946

Memorandum required to States Treaties and Paramountcy

1 Prior to the recent statement of the British Prime Minister in the House of Commons an assurance was given to the Princes that there was no intention on the part of the Crown to initiate any change in their relationship with the Crown or the rights guaranteed by their treaties and engagements without their consent. It was at the same time stated that the Princes' consent to any changes which might emerge as a result of negotiations would not unreasonably be withheld. The Chamber of Princes has since confirmed that the Indian States fully share the general desire in the country for the immediate attainment by India of her full stature. His Majesty's Government have now declared that if the succession Government or Governments in British India desire independence no obstacle would be placed in their way. The effect of these announcements is that all those concerned with the future of India wish her to attain a position of independence within or without the British Commonwealth. The Delegation have come here to assist in resolving the difficulties which stand in the way of India fulfilling this wish.

2 During the interim period which must elapse before the coming into operation of a new Constitutional structure under which British India will be independent or fully self governing paramountcy will remain in operation. But the British Government could not and will not in any circumstances transfer paramountcy to an Indian Government.

3 In the meanwhile the Indian States are in a position to play an important part in the formulation of the new Constitutional structure for India and His Majesty's Government have been informed by the Indian States that they desire in their own interests and in the interests of India as a whole both to make their contribution to the framing of the structure and to take their due place in it when it is completed. In order to facilitate this they will doubtless strengthen their position by doing everything possible to ensure that their administrations conform to the highest standard. Where adequate standards cannot be achieved within the existing resources of the State they will no doubt arrange in suitable cases to form or join administrative units large enough to enable them to be fitted into the constitutional structure. It will also strengthen the position of States during this formulative period if the various Governments which have not already done so take active steps to place themselves in close and constant touch with public opinion in their States by means of representative institutions.

4 During the interim period it will be necessary for the States to conduct negotiations with British India in regard to the future regulation of matters of common concern especially in the economic and financial field. Such negotiations which will be necessary whether the States desire to participate in the new Indian Constitutional structure or not will occupy a considerable period of time and since some of the negotiations may well be incomplete when the new structure comes into being it will in order to avoid administrative difficulties be necessary to arrive at an understanding between the States and those likely to control the succession Government or Governments that for a period of time the then existing arrangements as to these matters of common concern should continue until the new agreements are completed. In this matter the British Government and the Crown Representative will lend such assistance as they can should it be so desired.

and should have the powers necessary to raise the finances required for the above subjects

* * * * *

- (4) The States will retain all subjects and powers other than those ceded to the Union

(u) It is the intention that the States should be given in the final Constituent Assembly appropriate representation which would not on the basis of the calculations adopted for British India, exceed 93, but the method of selection will have to be determined by consultation. The States would in the preliminary stage be represented by a Negotiating Committee

(i) The representatives of the Sections and the Indian States shall reassemble for the purpose of settling the Union Constitution

APPENDIX VI

SARDAR PATEL'S STATEMENT OF 5TH JULY 1947 ON INDIAN STATES

It was announced some days back that the Government of India had decided to set up a Department to conduct their relations with the States in matters of common concern. This Department has come into being today and the States have been informed to this effect. On this important occasion I have a few words to say to the Rulers of Indian States among whom I am happy to count many as my personal friends.

It is the lesson of history that it was owing to her political fragmented condition and our inability to make a united stand that India succumbed to successive waves of invaders. Our mutual conflicts and internecine quarrels and jealousies have in the past been the cause of our downfall and our falling victims to foreign domination a number of times. We cannot afford to fall into those errors or traps again. We are on the threshold of independence. It is true that we have not been able to preserve the unity of the country entirely unimpaired in the final stage. To the bitter disappointment and sorrow of many of us some parts have chosen to go out of India and to set up their own Government. But there can be no question that despite this separation a fundamental homogeneity of culture and sentiment reinforced by the compulsive logic of mutual interests would continue to govern us. Much more would this be the case with that vast majority of States which owing to their geographical contiguity and indissoluble ties economic cultural and political, must continue to maintain relations of mutual friendship and co-operation with the rest of India. The safety and preservation of these States as well as of India demand unity and mutual co-operation between its different parts.

When the British established their rule in India they evolved the doctrine of paramountcy which established the supremacy of British interests. That doctrine has remained undefined to this day but in its exercise there has undoubtedly been more subordination than co-operation. Outside the field of paramountcy there has been a very wide scope in which relations between British India and the States have been regulated by enlightened mutual interests. Now that British rule is ending the demand has been made that the States should regain their independence. In so far as paramountcy embodied the submission of States to foreign will I have every sympathy with this demand but I do not think it can be their desire to utilise this freedom from domination in a manner which is injurious to the common interests of India or which militates against the ultimate paramountcy of popular interests and welfare or which might result in the abandonment of that mutually useful relationship that has developed between British India and Indian States during the last century. This has been amply demonstrated by the fact that a great majority of Indian States have already come into the Constituent Assembly. To those who have not done so I appeal that they should join now. The States have already accepted the basic principle that for Defence Foreign Affairs and Communications they would come into the Indian Union. We ask no more of them than accession on these three subjects in which the common interests of the country are involved. In other matters we would scrupulously respect their autonomous existence.

This country with its institutions is the proud heritage of the people who inhabit it. It is an accident that some live in the States and some in British India but all alike partake of its culture and character. We are all put together by bonds of blood and feeling no less than of self interest. None can segregate us into segments no impassable barriers can be set up between us. I suggest that it is therefore better for us to make laws sitting together as friends than to make treaties as aliens. I invite my friends, the Rulers of States and their people to the Councils of Constituent Assembly in this spirit of friendliness and co-operation in a joint endeavour inspired by common allegiance to our motherland for the common good of us all.

There appears a great deal of misunderstanding about the attitude of the Congress towards the States. I should like to make it clear that it is not the desire of the Congress to interfere in any manner whatever with the domestic affairs of the States. They are no enemies of the Princely Order, but on the other hand wish them and their people under this regime all prosperity contentment and happiness. Nor would it be my policy to conduct the relations of the new Department with the States in any manner which savours of the domination of one over the other, if there would be any domination it would be that of our mutual interests and welfare. We have no ulterior motive or selfish interests to serve. Our common objective should be to understand each other's point of view and come to decisions acceptable to all and in the best interests of the country. With this object, I propose to explore the possibility of associating with the administration of the new Department a Standing Committee representative of both the States and British India.

We are at a momentous stage in the history of India. By common endeavour we can raise the country to a new greatness while lack of unity will expose us to fresh calamities. I hope the Indian States will bear in mind that the alternative to co-operation in the general interest is anarchy and chaos which will overwhelm great and small in a common ruin if we are unable to act together in the minimum of common tasks. Let not the future generation curse us for having had the opportunity but failed to turn it to our mutual advantage. Instead let it be our proud privilege to leave a legacy of mutually beneficial relationship which would raise this Sacred Land to its proper place amongst the nations of the world and turn it into an abode of peace and prosperity.

Here I digress. There was a universal acceptance among the States of the Cabinet Mission's Memorandum of May 12th and when the parties accepted my Statement of June 3rd they fully realised that withdrawal of Paramountcy would enable the States to regain complete sovereignty. That gave me a starting point from which to try and deal fairly with the States.

But before I got down to dealing with the States there was one other thing that I clearly had to do. I had to address myself to the problem of the mechanics of partition—a plan against my personal desires. As you all know, it took three years to separate Burma from India, in spite of the fact (as I can testify, as also His Highness of Bundi and others) that there are no roads running between India and Burma. Nevertheless, it took three years to arrange that partition. It took two years to separate the Province of Sind from Bombay. It took two years to separate the Province of Orissa from Bihar. Gentlemen, we decided that in less than 2½ months we shall have to go through the partitioning of one of the big countries in the world with 400 million inhabitants. There was a reason for the speed. I was quite certain that while the British overlordship remained no satisfactory conclusions could be reached psychologically between the parties. So once we got the two Governments set up and separated, they would be able to try and finish off the details in an atmosphere of goodwill.

Now the Indian Independence Act releases the States from all their obligations to the Crown. The States have complete freedom—technically and legally they are independent. Presently I will discuss the degree of independence which we ourselves feel is best in the interests of your own States. But there has grown up during the period of British administration, owing to the fact that the Crown Representative and the Viceroy are one and the same person, a system of co-ordinated administration on all matters of common concern which meant that the sub-continent of India acted as an economic entity. That link is now to be broken. If nothing can be put in its place, only chaos can result, and that chaos, I submit, will hurt the States first—the bigger the State the less the hurt and the longer it will take to feel it—but even the biggest of the States will feel itself hurt just the same as any small State. The first step was to set up some machinery by which it was possible to put the two future Governments of India—the Dominions of India and Pakistan—into direct touch with the States. So we conceived the scheme of setting up two States Departments within the future Governments. Please note that these States Departments are not the successors of the Political Department. They have been set up simultaneously and side by side. While the Political Department exercised functions relating to paramountcy on behalf of the Crown Representative, the States Departments are to take over those subjects gradually which have nothing to do with paramountcy but which will be concerned with relations with neighbouring States and also provide the machinery to negotiate in such matters. In India the States Department is under the admirable guidance of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel with my own Reforms Commissioner, Mr. V. P. Menon as Secretary. In Pakistan the Department is under Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar with Mr. Ikramullah as the Secretary. It was necessary to set up two States Departments, one in each Government because the States are theoretically free to link their future with whichever Dominion they may care. But when I say that they are at liberty to link up with either of the Dominions, may I point out that there are certain geographical compulsions which cannot be evaded. Out of something like 565 States the vast majority are irretrievably linked geographically with the Dominion of India. The problem therefore is of far greater magnitude with the Dominion of India than it is with Pakistan. In the case of Pakistan the States, although important are not so numerous, and Mr. Jinnah, the future

Governor General of Pakistan is prepared to negotiate the case of each State separately and individually. But in the case of India where the overwhelming majority of the States are involved clearly separate negotiation with each State is out of the question.

The first step that I took was to suggest that in the Bill before Parliament—the Indian Independence Act—a clause should be put in which would enable certain essential agreements to continue until renounced by either side. That was only done to ensure that there should be some continuity and to see if in the short time available it was not possible to get the agreement through with every State representative. It does not replace the need for Standstill agreements. It gives a very slight breathing space.

Now I think it is no exaggeration to say that most Rulers and Dewans were apprehensive as to what their future would be when paramountcy lapsed. At one time it appeared that unless they joined the Constituent Assembly and accepted the Constitution when it was framed they would be outside the organisation and left in a position which I submit if you think it over carefully no State could view with equanimity—to be left out having no satisfactory relations or contacts with either Dominion Government. You can imagine how relieved I was and I am sure you will yourselves have been equally relieved when Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel on taking over the States Department made if I may say so a most statesmanlike statement of what he considered were the essentials towards agreement between the States and the Dominion of India.

Let us turn for one moment to the Cabinet Mission Plan of 16th May 1946. In this Plan the proposal was that the States should surrender to the Central Government three subjects—Defence, External Affairs and Communications. That was a plan which to the best of my belief every Ruler and every State accepted as reasonable, fair and just. I talked with so many Rulers and everyone felt that Defence was a matter that a State could not conduct for itself. I am not talking of internal security but of defence against external aggression. I submit therefore that if you do not hark up with one or the other of the Dominions you will be cut off from any source of supplies of up to date arms or weapons.

External Affairs is inextricably linked up with Defence. External Affairs is something again which is outside the boundaries of India in which not even the greatest State can operate effectively. You can hardly want to go to the expense of having Ambassadors or Ministers or Consuls in all these foreign countries, surely you want to be able to use those of India and Pakistan. Once more I suggest that External Affairs is something that you have not dealt with since the formation of the East India Company. It would be difficult to operate and will also be a source of embarrassment for not to have to take it up and it can only be managed by those who manage the Defence of the country. I submit that if you take it up it will be a liability and not an asset.

The third subject is Communications. Communications is really a means of maintaining the life blood of the whole sub-continent. I imagine everybody agrees that the country has got to go on. The continuity of Communications is already provided for to a certain extent in the Indian Independence Act and most of the representatives here have come to discuss it as item 2 on the agenda.

Therefore I am sure you will agree that these three subjects have got to be handled for you for your convenience and advantage by a larger organisation. This seems so obvious that I was at a loss to understand why some Rulers were reluctant to accept the position. One explanation probably was that some of you were apprehensive that the Central Government would attempt to impose a financial liability on the States or encroach in other ways on their sovereignty. If I am right in this assumption at any rate so far as some Princes are concerned I think I must dispel their apprehensions and misgivings. The draft Instrument of Accession which I have caused to be circulated as a basis for discussion and not for publication to the representatives of the States provides that the States accede to the appropriate Dominion on three subjects only without any financial liability. Further that Instrument contains an explicit provision that in no other matters has the Central Government any authority to encroach on the internal autonomy or the sovereignty of the States. This would in my view be a tremendous achievement for the States. But I must make it clear that I have still to persuade the Government of India to accept it. If all of you would co-operate with me and are ready to accede I am confident that I can succeed in my efforts. Remember that the day of the transfer of power is very close at hand and if you are prepared to come you must come before the 15th August. I have no doubt that this is in the best interests of the States and every wise Ruler and wise Government would desire to link up with the great Dominion of India on a basis which leaves you great internal autonomy and which at the same time gets rid of your worries and cares over External Affairs, Defence and Communications.

The whole country is passing through a critical period. I am not asking any State to make any intolerable sacrifice of either its internal autonomy or independence. My scheme leaves you with all the practical independence that you can possibly use and makes you free of all those subjects which you cannot possibly manage on your own. You cannot run away from the Dominion Government which is your neighbour any more than you can run away from the subjects for whose welfare you are responsible. Whatever may be your decision I hope you feel that I have at least done my duty by the States.

His Excellency then proposed the following Committee for a detailed consideration of the items on the agenda:

His Highness the Chancellor of the Maharaja of Palak

His Highness the Maharaja of Baroda

His Highness the Maharaja of Gwalior

His Highness the Nawab of Bhopal

His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner

His Highness the Maharaja of Nawanagar

Mr. C. S. Venkataswami of Jodhpur

Sardar D. K. Sen

Dewan Bahadur C. P. Karunakara Menon of Cochin

Rai Bahadur D. A. Surve of Kolhapur

Mr. B. H. Zaidi of Rampur

His Excellency stated that the idea was to have a compact body to save time. They could split into two sub-committees, one to discuss the draft Instrument of Accession and the other to discuss the Standstill agreements and other matters. He sincerely trusted that the other State representatives would not leave Delhi and that they would maintain daily contact with the members of the Committee to make sure that the Committee is conversant with the majority feelings in the States.

Rulers the people and the country at large. I am particularly grateful to the Rulers of the States who showed a commendable appreciation of the realities of the situation and a benevolent regard for public good. To all of them undoubtedly the decisions they have taken have involved considerable sacrifice of powers and fortune. They have accepted this sacrifice cheerfully and voluntarily in the interests of their people and the country at large. I am sure their people will react favourably to this generous response to public interests.

Throughout my discussions with the Rulers I was careful to emphasise that the solution which we suggested for the difficult problems with which we and they were equally faced was for them to accept or reject of their own free will. There was no compulsion save that of events and of the circumstances and peculiar problems of their States. I also told them that in offering this solution we were actuated by nothing but the friendliest disposition towards them and had nothing but the ultimate good of the Princes and their people at heart. I also maintained that their voluntary surrender of most of the powers that they wielded so far would increase and not reduce the prestige that they have enjoyed and would create in the hearts of their people a place of lasting affection and regard which would redound to their glory. I am very glad that they all responded to these sentiments and would ask the people of these States to play their own part and to extend to each one of them unfailing cordiality and unstinted goodwill.

In future if the people of these States have any grievances they can only be against the popular representatives and leaders who would be charged with their interests and welfare and not against the Princes. These Princes have by their act of abnegation purchased in perpetuity their right to claim the devotion of their people. I am sure that very soon the Provincial Governments who would be acting for the Dominion Government in discharging administrative functions in these States will turn their thoughts and energies to ameliorating the conditions of the people and to devising ways and means of associating representatives of States with the fashioning of administrative measures. Let them all realise the stakes involved—some 56 000 square miles of territory with a population of about eight million a gross revenue of about 2 crores and immense potentialities for the future. It is the undisputable right of the people in these territories to modern amenities of Government which should be the governing consideration in everything that we do for them. It will also be the duty of the people concerned to help and co-operate wholeheartedly with the respective Provincial administrations in this process of unification and amelioration so that they may derive the full benefit of this great achievement.
